Level of Commitment: Moderately active

Skills and Experience: 5 years of professional software QA experience, 1,5 of which in video games industry (Lionbridge: loads of smaller titles, several AAA games: Gears of War, Halo, Fable, State of Decay, Forza to name couple).

Rest of the experience is sadly in web applications for Roche corporation instead of video games industry.

I have also been involved in several amateur video game QA projects (mostly mmos).

As to my passion for video games, lets just say im a bit of an addict. Im 26 years old and literally 20% of that time was spent playing video games.

Elder Scrolls skills: i've won Morrowind in a video games magazine contest and thats how my adventure with ES began. I got Morrowind about month before it was officially available and finished it about two times before its official premiere (in my country). First and most memorable playtrough was obviously done as a sneaky archer. I have fallen in love with the music, the atmosphere and of course the cliffracers. To be quite honest i have never felt that kind of attachment to any other video games.

Between Morrowind, Oblivion and Skyrim I have at least 5k hours played (i dont know if that's alot to you , but when comparing to my friends they are always shocked - and thats when i keep quite about my 365 days /played in WoW).

So yeah, I know my way around Elder Scrolls and especially Morrowind :)
