Interested in: QA

Level of Commitment: Somewhat active

Skills and Experience: Years of experience: 1 yr 4 months (currently employed as a QA Tester for a slot game company, hired for writing skills and attention to details).

Knowledge of Papyrus: Relatively minimal. I can read code easily enough, and have dabbled in it when playing with the mod creator but that's about it. I can google and read up on tutorials though.

Experience using Console commands: Have used them in Morrowind, Oblivion, and Skyrim. Most of my use is to work around bugs as I generally do not enjoy breaking the system. I have also worked for Red Hat in the past (just shy of 5 years) so am comfortable using console commands outside of game systems as well.

Knowledge of original Morrowind: Morrowind was my favourite game for a good ten years until it became too dated to run nicely on modern systems. While I cannot claim to have memorized every quest and dialogue, I have a good eye and ear for what sounds right and, of course, there is always the original to compare to :)

Availability and time available: I can realistically only commit 2-4 hours a week, likely on the weekend. I work full time as a tester and also have a family to look after so this will be fitting around that.
