Skills and Experience: Quote: "Our Writing, SFX and Concept Art departments are currently full. (Unless you're amazingly talented ;))"

I would like to begin by pointing out that I am most certainly capable of reading and my application is not a troll, nor is it an attempt to vex you. I simply feel that my writing skills are under the 'amazingly talented' category under which you will conditionally recruit additional writers. Please do not mistake confidence for cockiness. I am humbled to even have the opportunity to apply for a project such as the elder scrolls renewal development team.

My qualifications exceed expectations for a volunteer organization. I have been part of 37 different MMO roleplaying communities during which time I was expected to forge character backstories and begin live improvisation writing alongside hundreds of other people.

Not impressed? I have been to college 4 separate times during which I received multiple forms of education on speech, literature, english, mythology, and most importantly writing. On the side I have written songs, poems, short stories, and have been working on my own fantasy novel for 8 years. Writing is also in my blood as my father is a published author and my mother is a research analyst for local government commission (she researches and writes law).

Furthermore I have been modding skyrim for 3 years and have played Oblivion and Morrowind quite thoroughly as well. I am very familiar with the lore and immersion factors which pertain to the elder scrolls series.

This concludes my application. If you are interested or require more elaboration on the details of my experience/qualifications, feel free to contact me. Thank you for your consideration and your time.
