Skills and Experience: Started learning C with 13, moved to C++ and gave up really quick with 15 and then learned Java, Ruby and R over the course of my studies. Touched html/xml/css during some university courses.

Studying computerlinguistics right now wich involves some practical coding courses (focused on natural language).

I have created many small silly games with friends during holidays.

Played around with some engines, incuding unreal. Started some DotA 2 modding projects with Lua.

(Not a lot of proof, most things I did for learning coding were the exercises from the books I read or I experimented very similar things. Never really got the chance or idea for something new, my own)
